Most Important Comments Most Recent Reviews Landline Text is a service that allows you to send text messages to a phone that has a fixed wired connection (for example, a home phone) instead of a mobile phone or tablet. The message is converted from a text message to a voice message. The service is available for use with most of the blank pages listed on U.S. phone numbers. UU. Note: Text to the landline cannot deliver messages to phone numbers outside the United States. Text to Landline works with any mobile device that can send text messages. When you send a message to a landline, the recipient's address is checked first to make sure it is eligible for text service to the landline. Then, your text message is recorded in a female voice, and the service calls the recipient's phone. If the phone is answered, a recorded message will ask if the listener wants to accept a message that has been sent from a wireless subscriber [sender's phone number] free of charge. If the listener agrees, the recording of your text message will be played. If the call is received by an answering machine or voice mail, the recording will be delivered to the device or service as a voice mail. Note: Common abbreviations are recorded as full words. Abbreviations or unintelligible words are spoken as is or are letter by letter. You will be billed $0.25 for each text successfully delivered to the landline message. You will not be charged if the message is not properly delivered to a person, answering machine or voicemail. NOTE: A message is considered successfully delivered even if a live recipient decreases to hear it, and the $0.25 charge will apply.
