This can become a highly profitable income stream where you make much more than $20/hour. Even if you have no desire to create your own digital products, you can still make money off of a YouTube channel in several ways as follows: Google AdSense (you will be able to turn this on on YouTube after you have 1,000 subscribers and have accumulated 4,000 hours of watch time in one year). You could make money as an affiliate by recommending products in the English-learning niche and make commissions on that. You can have a Patreon community where you provide your students with extra value and charge them for it. Otherwise, you could start your own operation which will make you money for years to come. When you search for physics courses on the site, you can sort them by language, skill level, duration and more. Physics.org/Physics.org is managed by the U.K.-based Physics Institute, and it's your source for all things physics. When we typed in "learn English online" into YouTube, the YouTube channel with the least number of subscribers had about 1,300 subscribers. A subject like physics could be particularly challenging without any outside source of guidance. Once you're approved, you can apply and be offered teaching opportunities. Today, MIT OpenCourseWare has thousands of courses available on its site, including a sizable section on physics. Once you sign up for their platform, you can optimize your profile so you can get found. Check out TeachPartTime here >> Wyzant: Wyzant is a platform that caters to many subjects, English included. Realistically however, expect it to take a year or so to build up a sizable audience you can sell to. Starting your own channel will also require that you invest in camera equipment so you can have quality videos. Or, you can set up your own operation and build up an audience using a blog or YouTube channel. Let's discuss both of them. When you sign up to teach English with companies online, you will get paid an hourly wage based on several companies including the company you choose to teach with and the country where your student lives. There are a number of companies that will allow you to get paid for teaching English online. Photo Courtesy: @edXonline/Twitter The site offers many self-paced and instructor-led physics courses, ranging from general courses, like Question Everything: Scientific Thinking in Real Life, to more specialized topics like Introductory Electricity and Magnetism. You can set your own hourly rate on Wyzant. The drawback here is that sometimes, building up an online audience can take time. Either way, you can become successful with either path. Was this post helpful? With VIPKid, you will use their platform and resources to teach. Here's why: There's no limit to the size of the audience you can build. DaDa is based in mainland China and partners with the American TESOL Institute to teach English to children. EF Education First goFLUENT: goFLUENT also focuses on business English, so if you have a knack for teaching that, you can sign up to teach there as well. Regardless of which company you choose to go with, the most you will need is a reliable Internet connection and a webcam to get started. The second way for you to get paid teaching English is for you to build your own audience and then monetize it. This is significantly harder than the first option, but the rewards can be huge. You can apply to become a teacher on Lingoda here. CamblyCafetalkDaDa: DaDa is an online one-on-one English education platform for children 4 to 16 years old. It appears they do this so that they ensure every student that signs up with them is going through the same curriculum. The goal is to provide university-level educational opportunities to everyone around the world. Thus, if there are too many English teachers, even though you might qualify to teach on there, you will not be approved to teach English. Photo Courtesy: @khanacademy/ Twitter For physics, you can also select from a list of topics, including one-to-one and two-to-one tutoring; torque and angular momentum; and electric charge, field and potential to tackle. Many schools and other organizations offer free or inexpensive classes on various topics online, and physics is one of the most popular areas of study. Using those tools could increase your watch time and subscribers and build your audience. Content is geared toward specific age groups, such as elementary or high school students. On there, you'll be teaching English that is used for business purposes. Classes are available in multiple languages.Khan AcademyKhan Academy is a nonprofit organization that offers free instructional videos, exercises and more in a number of topics, including physics. Tutor.com likes to attract people who have PhD degrees, doctorates, or who have extensive experience teaching a particular subject. Thus, if you are committed to creating quality content and posting videos consistently, you could build up an audience quickly.Once you've built trust with your audience, you will be able to sell e-books and courses to them. You'll find games, ideas for experiments, links to other vetted online resources, information on careers in physics and advice for studying the field. Each of them comes with a helpful summary of the subjects discussed.Photo Courtesy: @physorg .com/Twitter EdXFounded in 2012, EdX is an online learning website founded by experts at MIT and Harvard. You can start from the beginning with Introduction to Physics and work your way through every topic or pick the ones that interest you most. For perspective, if you charge a monthly fee of $10 and 100 people sign up for your Patreon membership, that is $1,000 per month in revenue.Like I mentioned above, the difficult part of this is building up that initial audience. You could either sign up to teach with online-based companies. From the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) to Khan Academy, there are several places where you can learn physics on your own time and at your own pace, all without ever leaving your home.CourseraCoursera offers thousands of classes taught by top instructors from universities and companies around the world. Each course is 100 percent online, and most feature videos, discussion boards, homework assignments, lectures and more. But even if you don't have that, you can start on your phone and upgrade later.You can get paid to teach English online. cube29 Physical formulas and phenomenon user6940940 Simple hand drawn physics doodle premium vector sankaido504 Photo Courtesy: Tra Nguyen/Unsplash Once upon a time, if you wanted to learn about a topic like physics, you had to either take a course or read a book and attempt to navigate it yourself. Photo Courtesy: @coursera/Twitter Physics courses are available from institutions like Stanford University, University of Virginia, University of Geneva, University of Maryland and University of Tokyo. In this post, we've shared the top ways to go about doing that.You can easily start by signing up with one of the companies mentioned in the post. The disadvantage there is that you're at the mercy of changes that happen with the company. Let us know in the comments below. However, you don't need to be a professional teacher to teach English online.You need to have available time on your calendar for when you tutor students.You need a payment portal especially if you will be finding your own clients/students.You will need a video conferencing service like Skype or Zoom. Under the "Explore" section of the website, you'll find free lectures, online courses and educational materials. It can be discouraging creating videos for months and not receive the results you want.There are tools like TubeBuddy and vidIQ that you can use to research YouTube topics and increase your chances of your videos being found. According to their website, you can expect to earn up to $22/hour. There's also a review section for the AP Physics Exam if you're a high school student.MIT OpenCourseWareIn 2001, MIT announced that it would make all of its undergraduate and graduate course material available online for anyone to use as an educational resource. Although students come from different countries, it appears most of them are from China. If you've taught in a formal setting before, that will be helpful. Like Coursera, it offers free and paid classes on thousands of topics taught by university professors, nonprofit professionals and business experts from some of the top organizations in the world. Check out VIPKid here >>TeachPartTime: TeachPartTime is another platform that allows you to sign up and be approved. Once you're done with a teaching session, you will log your hours and then Wyzant will bill the student, take a cut, and send you a payment.Tutor.com: Similar to Wyzant, you will need to apply and be approved for specific subjects on Tutor.com. This is a misconception that is usually raised as a concern when you mention teaching English online.The truth is that while you should know essential aspects of the English language so you can teach your students well, you don't need to have a degree in English.Here is what you do need.You need to be fluent in English.You need a desire to teach. Courses may feature videos, online textbooks, transcripts from lectures and assignments that were given to students who took the class in the past.Photo Courtesy: John Phelan/Wikimedia Commons MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET Are you in between jobs or looking for a side hustle you can work from home?Teaching English is a great gig to get into and earn as much as $25 an hour if you sign up with online companies that hire English tutors.Or you could make unlimited income if you build your own audience using a blog or YouTube channel.What qualifications do you need to get paid for teaching English online? The demand for learning English online is huge with English becoming the more preferred language for most business and educational transactions. Well, first things first, you don't need to be an English major. In some cases, the courses can even help you earn degrees and certificates. It's best to do this on a desktop or laptop so you can share your screen and use it as a virtual whiteboard or to show your students a PowerPoint presentation, for instance.You need a written cancellation policy if you will be seeking out your own students instead of depending on a platform.If you plan on teaching English online, there are two main ways you can do that. We'll discuss 10 popular ones below:VIPKid: To become an English teacher with VIPKid, you will need to sign up and get approved. Even if you have none of these, it's worth a try.Englishunt: To apply to teach on Englishunt, you need a teaching certification and a degree from a four-year institution.Lingoda: Students who want to learn English, German, Spanish, and French can sign up to receive lessons on Lingoda. Once you have been approved, you can set up your desired hours and students will start to book you. Thanks to technology, however, all you need is a computer with an internet connection, and you can learn practically everything there is to know about even the most challenging topics.
