Maxim customer service

Maxim Group offers round-the-clock customer support via multiple channels, including phone, email, and live chat. The company also provides support in various languages to cater to its global audience. The team collects user feedback to understand their needs and preferences, which informs the company's continuous improvement efforts. Although Maxim magazine makes it easy to subscribe or renew a subscription, cancelling can be time-consuming. However, the company promises to refund any unused portion of a subscription if the customer is unsatisfied. To cancel, users can follow these steps: log in to their account, request a cancellation and refund, and send an email or call the subscription service number. Maxim also offers an online alternative, where users can manage their account and follow the cancellation process. Alternatively, users can contact customer service directly at 800-829-5572 or use a third-party service like Get Human to place the call on their behalf.
