Is Bunnings the best place to get it?Sometimes it's a no-brainer to go to Bunnings for what you need, but other times it's not so clear.If it's something like builders plastic in Australia and New Zealand, then Bunnings is probably the best and easiest. But if you want something for a different kind of project, then, to be honest, I've always found Bunnings to be a bit limited for choice. So the answer on whether to get plastic sheeting products from Bunnings or not is... depends.You know how it goes, Bunnings has a price matching service and has outcompeted almost every mum and pop hardware store in Australasia into oblivion so where else would you get it right? Of course, if you leave out big commercial quantities and highly specific bespoke products, for the every day Joe, it's pretty much Bunnings followed by Mitre 10 and Home Hardware where people get polycarbonate sheeting and panels and everything else they need handyman and DIY wise in Australasia. Sigh... It's priced matched, you can impulse buy a bunch of other stuff while you're there... Sigh... pick up all and sundry additional fasteners, nuts and bolts in the process. Sigh... I kind of feel bad, but it really is very convenient. Let's put it this way. If my kids don't give me a Bunnings gift card for my birthday or Christmas, something has gone seriously awry. So yep, I reckon if it's for a straightforward need, pick up your builder's plastic sheeting from Bunnings. But if you want some plastic for a project like a little greenhouse or similar, you might need to look further afield. Every time I need something robust and clear for hot box to start plants in early or something to re-cover my little greenhouse with, I'm usually disappointed with what's on offer at Bunnings. For something that won't tear immediately, the only thing I've only been able to find is reinforced plastic tarp that has that nylon weave in a small square pattern on it. I find the size it comes in quite limiting for a start, plus after about a year in direct sun, all you have left is the square nylon bits with non of the plastic remaining. Check out the FAQ below for some alternative suppliers if you need something a bit different.Frequently Asked Questions For Plastic Sheets: BunningsDoes Bunnings sell clear plastic?You can get 1200 x 450mm Clear Plastic Liner from Bunnings. Also from Bunnings, you can get a clear plastic (polyethylene) tarp (3.0m x 4.0m) that is reinforced with nylon weave that makes it resistant to tearing. This can come in handy for a range of places around the house like balconies, greenhouses and patios etc. It is made by Whites and is called Weatherview Screen.Alternative Suppliers For Plastic Sheetting Other Than BunningsIn Australia, you might like to try Plastics For Industry. They've got a huge range of plastic sheeting products. You could also check out Plastic Warehouse.If you are looking for an alternative supplier of plastic sheeting products in New Zealand, check out Modern Plastics for their large range of plastic sheeting products too.A Bit More About The Range Of Plastic SheettingBuilders PlasticBuilder's plastics are a type of polyethylene film which can be used for waterproofing and as an insulating material in the building industry. You'll find both black and clear builder's plastics at Bunnings so you won't have to worry about a colour clash.It come in various lengths and widths so you'll be able to find a sheeting that's suitable for your job whether it is big or small. They come in two different widths: 2000mm and 2500mm.Builders plastics are available in three thicknesses: 300 microns, 600 microns and 900 microns - the thicker materials will provide slightly better insulation but they're more expensive.PVC SheettingPVC is a type of plastic sheeting that's often used in the construction industry. It can be either opaque or transparent, and available at Bunnings in sizes up to 2000mm x 6000mm - so you'll find exactly what you're looking for here!You might want to take into account PVC's ease of cutting when choosing your material though as it can't be cut with home scissors like some plastics can.It also comes in different thicknesses: 300 microns, 600 microns and 900 microns but don't forget about its higher price tag too!So if you need something that will last longer than builder's plastics then we recommend going for the stronger PVC sheets. They may cost more initially but it'll be worth it in the long run.PVC Plastic Sheetting Price: $35 per sheet | Materials Thickness: 300-900 Microns | Available Sizes: 2000mm x 6000mmPolycarbonate SheettingPrice: $45 per sheet | Materials Thickness: 300-900 Microns | Available Sizes: 2000mm x 6000mmPolycarbonate plastic sheeting is the strongest and most durable of all materials, making it a good choice if you have high traffic or heavy winds at your site.For the ultimate protection, we recommend polycarbonate as it can't be easily cut with a knife or scissors. It also doesn't rip like some other plastics which means that you'll get more life out of your product!Polycarbonate Plastic Sheetting Price is higher than PVC at $45 but its versatility really makes up for this cost. The only downside is because it's so strong, cutting could be difficult, especially if you don't have access to power tools. Polycarbonate sheets are available in thicknesses from 600 micron and 900 microns too - all depending on what you're looking for. link to Standard Roof Pitch And Roof Types: Australia 2022 link to Painted Concrete: Floors, Walls, And More Before purchasing a bunnings corrugated sheets, it is essential to consider some properties. These properties include conductivity, corrosion resistance, density, hardness, and impact resistance. First of all, metal sheets are thermal conductors. Therefore, sheets with low conductivity are ideal for insulation, while those with high conductivity are used in applications like refrigeration. Secondly, it is essential to consider the density of the metal plate because it will determine how much a component of a specific size will weigh. This property is vital in the aerospace and automotive industry, where weight matters.Moreover, corrosion resistance of a bunnings corrugated sheets is also essential. This is because some metal sheets can withstand harsh environmental conditions while others cannot. Therefore, the sheet you select should fit your needs. The other property to consider impacts resistance. If the sheet is likely to be subjected to vigorous collision and shock, you need to pick one with high resistance. Furthermore, metal hardness also matters because it determines the ability of a sheet to resist the pressure exerted on its surface. There are three types of hardness: Rockwell, Brinell, and Vickers. Therefore, the metal plate you select should have the hardness you require.If you need to buy a wholesale bunnings corrugated sheets, Alibaba.com is the online platform to visit.
